MACCABI FACT SHEET

1. In 1932, the first world-wide competition for Jewish athletes was held in Tel Aviv. Five hundred athletes from 23 countries came. Since that first Maccabiah there have been 12 Games.
2. The Games take their name from Judah Maccabee, the Israeli warrior, who against numerically superior odds, fought off the Syrian army and rekindled the Holy Temple's lamp. The lamp's flame, which burned miraculously for 8 days, will symbolize victory at the '88 Games.
3. The Maccabiah is held every four years in Israel as a two-week international competition. Jewish men and women from 35 nations compete in 30 sports.
4. A spin-off of the Israeli Maccabiah is the Maccabi Youth Games, which are held biennially on 3 continents - Europe, Pan-American and North America.
5. Participants of Youth Games are ages 13 - 16.
6. The first North American Maccabi Youth Games were held in Memphis 1982 - 450 athletes.
7. The second biennial North American Maccabi Youth Games were held in Detroit 1984 - 900 athletes.
8. The third North American Maccabi Youth Games were held in Toronto 1986 - 2200 athletes.
9. Regional Games are held on odd years. 1985 - Regional Games in Chicago. 1987 - Regional Games in Cleveland.
10. January 1986 Chicago wins bid to host 1988 Youth Games.
11. The 1988 North American Maccabi Youth Games are hosted by the Jewish Community Centers of Chicago, coordinated by JCC Metro Teen, affiliated with the Jewish Federation of Metropolitan Chicago and supported by the Jewish United Fund. The Games are jointly sponsored by JWB, Maccabi World Union, Maccabi North America, Maccabi Canada and the U.S. Committee Sports for Israel.
12. The 1988 North American Maccabi Youth Games will be the largest Jewish youth sporting event in the world attracting almost twice the number of athletes as the recent Winter Olympics in Calgary.
13. Over 3,000 athletes spanning 5 continents will participate for 6 days of competition in 13 different sports. Sports include: basketball, gymnastics, karate, racquetball, soccer, softball, squash, swimming, table tennis, tennis, track and field, volleyball and wrestling.

14. Athletes will be hosted by over 1,500 families from the Chicago Jewish Community. Each home will host 2 athletes. Area synagogues, temples and community groups will 'adopt' a visiting delegation and disperse athletes throughout their member.
15. International guests (coaches, delegation leaders and families) will be lodged in 3 Hyatt hotels around the city.
16. The Games will take place at high schools, park districts, and university sites along the north shore, city and suburbs. Sites extend as far south as University of Illinois at Chicago and as far north as Highland Park High School. An elaborate bus transportation network will be deployed to move athletes from homes to competition sites. See venues listing page.
17. In addition to sporting competition there will be ongoing social and cultural events.

MACCABI '88

A CONCEPTUAL FRAMEWORK

FOR THE OPENING AND CLOSING CEREMONIES

It was in Max Nordau's ideal of "healthy soul, healthy body, strong spirit" that the philosophy of Maccabi was born. Jewish youth in an age of ghetto life were striving for a quickness of body and mind. The first Maccabiah in 1932 was more than just a sporting event. Its Jewish participants from around the world had to be illegally smuggled into Palestine in order to compete. As they still exist today, the Games are not just an Olympic sporting event, but a Maccabiah comprised of thousands of Jewish athletes.

Now, we gather our youth in North America every two years to similarly show our strength of muscle and spirit.

Months before the games, Jewish athletes from hundreds of cities around the world are gathering in their synagogues and Jewish community centers preparing to meet and compete with other Jewish young men and women from around the world.

The sense of history and spirit are demonstrated most fully at the formal Opening and Closing Ceremonies.

The Opening Ceremony at Northwestern's Dyche Stadium begins with the traditional procession of the delegations, ceremonial torch-lighting and the singing of the American National Anthem and Hatikva. Without sparing any of the pageantry of Olympic ceremony, the Games's Opening Ceremony must be illuminated by the spark of Maccabi with a flavor of the international Jewish community and the spirit of Klal Yisrael.

The Closing Ceremony carries an important tradition which will involve the Chicago and Maccabi community. A community-wide run, finishing at Northwestern's McGaw Hall, the site of the Closing Ceremony, will culminate in a ceremony of remembrance to commemorate the Israeli athletes murdered during the World Olympics at Munich.

Share the Maccabi Experience . . . Chicago '88

NORTH AMERICAN
YOUTH GAMES
CHICAGO 1988

This summer more than 3,000 amateur athletes representing Jewish communities from around the world are coming to Chicago for the largest youth sporting event in the world — the 1988 North American Maccabi Youth Games.

During the week of August 18 - 25, JCC and Metro Teen will welcome more than 75 delegations of Jewish youth aged 13 to 16 . . . athletes looking for competition, cultural experiences, and the opportunity to feel part of a larger Jewish community.

The Maccabi Experience: Sports

"The Chicago Games promise to be the biggest and the best Maccabi in history," says Shayle P. Fox, commissioner of the Games. "Not only will this year's Games see the largest level of participation, but there will be a record 13 sports as well."

Two new sports, karate and wrestling, have been added to track and field, basketball, gymnastics, racquetball, soccer, softball, squash, swimming, table tennis, tennis, and volleyball.

The Games will be held at facilities in Chicago and throughout the North Shore, including the Kaplan site and JCC Apachi Day Camp grounds in Northbrook. Events will be free of charge and open to the public.

The Maccabi Experience: Cultural Events

In addition to competition, there will be major cultural and social activities to complement the athletic events. Maccabi nightlife will allow athletes to take in the sites of Chicago, and special events will include the Jewish Folk Arts Festival, an open-air concert at Grant Park's Petrillo Bandshell, and a tour of the Museum of Science and Industry.

These events, along with the opening and closing Maccabi ceremonies, will also be free of charge and open to the public.

The Maccabi Experience: Our Jewish Heritage

"As exciting as the athletic competition and cultural events will be, there are more important issues at the heart of the Maccabi Experience," explains Fox. "The Games and special events have been designed to heighten our Jewish awareness and remind us that we share a common heritage that unites us in competition and cooperation."

The Maccabi Experience: Building Friendships

"Along these lines," continues Fox, "another important purpose of the Games is to build friendship and camaraderie."

"Not only will the athletes learn and grow from each other, but the Maccabi Experience offers the unique opportunity for 1,500 Jewish families in the Chicago area to get to know the athletes . . . as individuals, as representatives of different cultures, as fellow Jews, as friends . . . by opening their homes to house these special visitors during their stay in Chicago."

The Maccabi Experience: The Maccabiah

The North American Games are the junior counterpart to the Israeli Maccabiah for adult athletes, held every four years in Tel Aviv. The Youth Games occur every two years, helping to generate excitement for the Maccabiah. Biennial games are also held in Europe and Pan America.

The first North American Games were held in Memphis in 1982 with 450 athletes. The second biennial Games were held in Detroit in 1984 with 900 athletes. And the third biennial Games were held in Toronto in 1986 with 2,200 athletes.

The 1988 Games are sponsored and hosted by JCC Metro Teen, JCCs of Chicago, in association with the Jewish Federation of Metropolitan Chicago, Jewish Welfare Board (JWB), the U.S. Committee on Sports for Israel, Maccabi Canada, and Maccabi North America.

The organizing committee represents a cross section of 13 business and community leaders, including BH/MK JCC's own Alice Segal. Governor James Thompson is serving as honorary chairman. ★

Chicago '88 Share the Maccabi Experience...

The thrill of athletic competition

Where can you go this summer to see more than 3,000 amateur Jewish athletes, representing countries all over the world, compete in sports like tennis, volleyball, soccer, and gymnastics...free of charge? The Maccabi Games!

During the week of August 18 - 25, more than 75 delegations of athletes aged 13 - 16 will backstroke, dribble, kick, swing, jump, pitch, serve, and lob their way around Chicago's parks and gymnasiums in a series of Games and special events designed to unite the international Jewish community in spirited and friendly competition.

The 1988 North American Maccabi Youth Games will be the largest ever with record levels of participation and a record 13 sports.

"A total of 33 countries have been invited to participate, including for the first time nations in Western Europe," says Shayle P. Fox, commissioner of the Games. "The U.S. delegation will be the largest. We have been in touch with JCCs and Maccabi clubs all across the country, inviting each to send a delegation. Already 50 delegations have responded, saying they will indeed participate.

"What a joy the Chicago Games will be...youths from all over the world, engaged in athletic competition, as individuals and as teams, bonded as Jewish brothers and sisters. Spectators can share in this excitement and have the opportunity to watch future Olympic champions."

The Games are free, easily accessible, and open to the public. Events will be held in the park districts of Evanston, Skokie, and Wilmette; at the UIC physical education building; at the McGaw YMCA in Evanston; and at other locations close to home, including the Kaplan site of BH/MK JCC.

The athletic events will take place from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. on the following dates in August:

basketball 19, 21, 22, 23, 24
gymnastics, (team and all around) 22
gymnastics, (individual) 24
karate 19, 21, 22, 23
racquetball 19, 21, 22, 23, 24
soccer 19, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25
softball 19, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25
squash 19, 21, 22, 23, 24
swimming 21, 22, 23, 24
table tennis 19, 21, 22, 23, 24 tennis 19, 21, 22, 23, 24
volleyball 19, 21, 22, 23, 24
wrestling 19, 21

Individual medals for first, second, and third places will be awarded each day. Team medals, one for each member of the winning team, will be awarded on the last day of competition — August 25.

For a detailed schedule of events and locations, please call 675-2200, ext. 150.

The 1988 North American Maccabi Youth Games are hosted by Jewish Community Centers of Chicago, coordinated by JCC Metro Teen, affiliated with the Jewish Federation of Metropolitan Chicago, and supported by the Jewish United Fund. The Games are jointly sponsored by JWB, Maccabi World Union, Maccabi North America, Maccabi Canada, and the U.S. Committee Sports for Israel. ★

Become A Friend for Life

JCC is looking for 1,500 families living in the northern suburbs to house Maccabi athletes and provide a few meals and some transportation during the Games, August 18 - 25. This is an outstanding way to learn about different cultures, to share our Jewish heritage, to be part of the excitement that is the Maccabi Experience. If you are interested, call 675-2200 for a brochure.

Dear Mort:

I am writing as per our recent conversation regarding the Youth Maccabi Games. I believe we agreed to the following arrangements:

1. You will discuss the Youth Maccabi Games with the Metropolitan Executives and develop a list of Centers interested in hosting the games. Larry Szpirglas will do the same with the other Executives at their seminars in Ft. Lauderdale. Following the meetings JWB will develop a schedule of sponsoring Centers.
2. The official title of the games will be the North American Youth Maccabi Games. Each set of games will be sponsored by the host JCC along with AZYF and the United States Committee for Sports in Israel (National World Maccabi Union). JWB will serve as a consultant to the JCC/Ys.
3. Beginning in 1986 the Youth Maccabi Games would be held 3 out of every 4 years. (The youth games would not be held during the summer of the Maccabiad Games in Israel - 1985, 1989, 1993, 1997, 2001).
4. JWB would convene an ad hoc committee composed of Physical Education Directors from sponsoring Centers, representatives of the co-sponsors, and several Center and JWB lay leaders interested in the project to develop a set of appropriate standards for the games, determine the sports and games to be included in the competition, and approve various procedures for participating teams.
5. JWB would encourage its affiliated Centers to participate in the youth games, distribute materials and information and generally be supportive to the sponsoring Centers. The Jewish Community Center of Detroit will develop a manual which JWB will update periodically and distribute.

JWB receives support from Federations, Jewish Community Centers and YM-YWHAs and the UJA-Federation Joint Campaign of Greater New York

6. JWB would serve in a consulting role as each sponsoring Center begins the planning process to hold its games.
7. The JWB staff member responsible for HPE&R Services would be present during the games and be available during the evaluation process so that experiences from each set of games can be shared with other sponsoring Centers.

Mort, please feel free to call me if you have any questions. I suggest that we convene the ad hoc committee prior to the JWB Board meeting scheduled for May 3, 1985.

Sincerely,

LEONARD RUBIN, Director
Program Development Services

MACCABI GAMES: A MILESTONE FOR CHICAGO AND THE HISTORY OF JEWISH ATHLETIC ENDEAVOR

Skokie, IL. --The fourth biennial North American Maccabi Youth Games set for August 18-25, 1988 in Chicago are destined to be a milestone in the histories of the city, North America and the world of Jewish athletic endeavor.

The '88 Games, with over 3,000 teenage athletes expected, will be the largest Maccabi to date and the largest youth sporting event in the world for 13-to-16 year old athletes, according to a report by Hugh Greenberg of Detroit, JWB North American Maccabi Games Committee chairman.

Maccabi youth competitions are held biennially for Europe and Pan America, as well as North America. Since the first North American Games were held in 1982 with 450 athletes, participation has skyrocketed. In 1984, 900 participated in Detroit and in 1986, 2,200 competed in Toronto.

The Games will be the largest Jewish communal event in North America, and have distinction in Chicago as the largest amateur sporting event to be held since the 1959 Pan American Games.

The 1988 North American Maccabi Youth Games are hosted by the Jewish Community Centers of Chicago, coordinated by JCC Metro Teen, affiliated with the Jewish Federation of Metropolitan Chicago and supported by the Jewish United Fund. The Games are jointly sponsored by JWB, Maccabi World Union, Maccabi North America, Maccabi Canada and the U.S. Committee Sports for Israel.

More than 10,000 people will be involved in the Games, including 2,500 Chicago volunteers who are helping with preparation and administration and 1,500 local families who will house over 3,000 young athletes from all over the world. More than 50 delegations from North America, and 20 foreign teams including amateur Jewish athletes from Israel, Australia, Venezuela and Brazil are expected.

The participants will compete in basketball, gymnastics, martial arts, racquetball, soccer, swimming, softball, squash, table tennis, tennis, track and field, karate and wrestling and volleyball. In addition, the Games will offer an unsurpassed opportunity for a rich Jewish social, cultural and educational experience for the teenagers, their families and the Chicago Jewish community.

Maccabi-related activities will range from the Olympic-style opening ceremonies an open air rock and blues festival in Grant Park's Petrillo bandshell, a 10-K Memorial run commemorating the Israelis slain in Munich, and majestic closing ceremonies.

add 2/ Maccabi Milestone

Competitions are expected to be held at facilities in Chicago and the North Shore including the Broadway Armory and Warren Park in Chicago, University of Illinois at Chicago: Northwestern University's Dyche Stadium and McGaw Hall; Highland Park High School; Maine East High School, Park Ridge; Glenbrook South High School, Glenview; Glenbrook North High School and JCC Camp Apachi in Northbrook and parks and facilities in Winnetka, Morton Grove, Wilmette, Evanston, Golf Maine and Highland Park.

Share the Maccabi Experience

The 1988 slogan "Share the Maccabi Experience" was chosen to exemplify the JCC/Maccabi organizing committee's hopes that the Games would be more than an athletic competition.

The Games are intended to enrich and strengthen the Jewish identity of teens as they learn more about Israel, Jewish history, customs and tradition. The most important aspect of the Games, however, is expected to be a profound impact upon the participants.

"The warm glow and memories shared by Jewish teenagers from around the world through competition, association and development of new friendships are the core of the Maccabi Experience," said Shayle P. Fox commissioner of the 1988 Maccabi Games. "This pervasive event will potentially affect every home in Chicago's Jewish community; Maccabi will link, solidify and enhance Jewish communal life. Previous delegations's spokespeople have described the "Maccabi Experience" best: "The North American Maccabi Youth Games have become a catalyst for attracting teenagers back to JCCs"

Samuel Sorin, JCCs of Philadelphia

"All communities should be aware of how much the Maccabi Games can mean to them. In Detroit, the Games brought people out of the woodwork. They gave the opportunity for people who had never participated in Jewish activities to become active as volunteers or host families. It brought the whole Jewish community together for a cultural/social/athletic/learning experience."

Marty Oliff, JCCs of Detroit

CHICAGO METROPOLITAN AREA TO HOST
1988 NORTH AMERICAN MACCABI YOUTH GAMES

CHICAGO -- The largest youth sporting event in the world of athletes 13-to-16 years old will be held here this summer as more than 3,000 teenage athletes gather for the fourth biennial North American Maccabi Youth Games August 18-25, 1988

The 1988 North American Maccabi Youth Games are hosted by the Jewish Community Centers of Chicago, coordinated by JCC Metro Teen, affiliated with the Jewish Federation of Metropolitan Chicago and supported by the Jewish United Fund. The Games are jointly sponsored by JWB, Maccabi World Union, Maccabi North America, Maccabi Canada and the U.S. Committee Sports for Israel.

More than 50 delegations from North America and 20 foreign teams of amateur Jewish athletes including Israel, Australia, Venezeula, and Brazil, are expected to participate in the Games.

"The 1988 Maccabi Youth Games will be the largest amateur sporting event in Chicago since the Pan American Games were held here in 1959," said Shayle P. Fox, commissioner of the 1988 Games. "But the impact of the Maccabi extends well beyond the competition. The Games provide the athletes who participate with an experience they will carry with them for a lifetime."

The week's activities consist of 41 athletic competitions including basketball, track and field, soccer, gymnastics, tennis and swimming, as well as social and cultural events.

The competitions are expected to be held at facilities in Chicago and the North Shore including the Broadway Armory and Warren Park in Chicago, University of Illinois, Chicago; Northwestern University's Dyche Stadium and McGaw Hall; Highland Park High School; Maine East High School, Park Ridge; Glenbrook South High School, Glenview; Glenbrook North High School and JCC Camp Apachi in Northbrook, and parks and facilities in Winnetka, Morton Grove, Wilmette, Evanston, Golf Maine and Highland Park.

Cultural and other special events will be held in the Bernard Horwich/Mayer Kaplan Jewish Community Center, Chicago and Skokie, and Chicago's Grant Park Petrillo Bandshell and Museum of Science and Industry.

More than 2,500 community volunteers will assist in the preparation and administration of the games and an additional 1,500 volunteer families will house the visiting athletes.

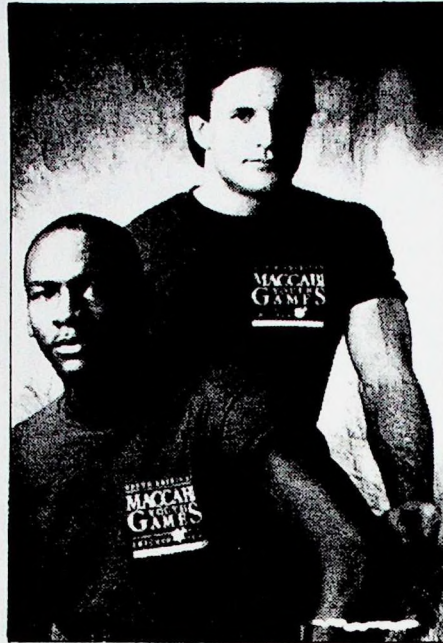

The Maccabi Youth Games are the junior counterpart to the Israeli Maccabiah which is held very four years in Tel Aviv. The Maccabi Youth Games are held every two years in preparation for the Israeli Maccabiah for athletes ages 18 and over.

Since the first Maccabi games were held in Memphis in 1982 with 450 athletes, the Games have grown in participation and popularity. The second biennial Games held in Detroit in 1984, drew 900 athletes and participation more than doubled to 2,200 athletes at the third biennial Games in Toronto in 1986.

Chicago Community Says "Yes" to Maccabi

The following article shows how a local community is being mobilized by a project that will involve JCCs and Ys from all over North America: the 1988 North American Maccabi Youth Games, of which JWB is a cosponsor, along with Maccabi World Union, Maccabi North America, Maccabi Canada, and the U.S. Committee Sports for Israel.

by Amy Rosenthal

In 12 months of planning, Shayle Fox, commissioner of the 1988 North American Maccabi Youth Games, has never been turned down by anyone in the Jewish community when he has asked for help in organizing the Games.

"Chicago has said 'Yes' to Maccabi. The community mobilization here has been tremendous," says Fox. "Maccabi has united the community as never before. I am grateful that so many people are giving so much of their time and energy to make these Games a success."

Some 8,000 people are expected to participate as volunteers and spectators at the 1988 Maccabi Games. More than 2,000 community volunteers will be involved, and 1,500 local families will be called upon to host the visitors. The Games will bring 3,000 young athletes to Chicago on August 18-25 to compete in a total of 41 events in 13 sports.

According to Fox, "Enthusiasm for the Games has become contagious." Because this year's Games will be the largest in the history of Maccabi, Fox acknowledges that pulling together thousands of details will be an enormous task. He says that he will rely on teamwork—the key to success in any athletic endeavor.

Built on an elaborate lay leadership network, the structure of the Games has grown to 19 committees, including operations, sports, facilities, transportation, special events, public relations, medical, security, food, and accreditation—among others. Over 200 individuals have been diligently working to produce the '88 Maccabi Games.

The Maccabi "team" extends to Fox's family as well. Shayle's brother, Michael, is chairman of the sports committee, and his wife, Deanna, chairs the hospitality and protocol committee. The couple's three children will all be volunteer workers during the Games.

One of the most difficult tasks, Fox admits, will be finding host families for the 3,000 athletes who will descend upon Chicago's North Shore community this summer. He describes the intricate lay structure of the housing committee: "There are four housing zones, each with its own subcommittee. Each synagogue in the area will adopt an entire delegation; this way, visiting athletes will be grouped by region."

As commissioner of the Games, Fox's personal goal is to make this a week to remember for the young athletes. "I recall my first experience playing competitive sports before a large audience. My high school basketball team played in a city-wide tournament. I can still remember the excitement and anticipation each of us felt. Win or lose, each player felt a sense of pride in just having participated."

It is this feeling of accomplishment that Fox hopes to impart to all Maccabi participants and volunteers. "I want everyone to feel that the emphasis of the Games is participation; it's the joining of Jewish athletes from all corners of the world in competition, cultural sharing, and friendship."

Fox also sees an important part of Maccabi's role as enriching the local Jewish community and participants. He explains that "the 1988 slogan, 'Share the Maccabi Experience,' was chosen to exemplify the JCC/Maccabi organizing committee's hopes that the Games would be more than an athletic competition."

The Games are intended to enhance and strengthen the Jewish identity of teenagers as they learn more about Israel and Jewish history, customs, and traditions. "The sense of community and memories shared by Jewish teenagers from around the world through competition, association, and development of new friendships are at the core of the 'Maccabi Experience,'" Fox says.

In 1988, years after his first basketball tournament, Shayle Fox still has exuberance for athletic competition and those who make it possible. "This proves," he says, "what the efforts of our dedicated volunteers can do to provide positive channels for our youth, to promote interchange across the country and internationally, and to maintain close identification with the Jewish community. I feel honored to work with them." ■

Jaffe primed for Maccabi

By BOB SONENFELD

Correspondent

Harboring no illusion to becoming the next Mark Spitz or Don Schollander, a West Rogers Park swimmer yearns to make good.

Like Spitz, he is Jewish and has five letters in his surname. But for Aron Jaffe, that's mainly where the similarity ends.

Jaffe will be part of Chicago's delegation in the forthcoming North American Youth Maccabi Games, a scaled-down version of Israel's Maccabiah Games or "Jewish Olympics," scheduled for Chicago and the northern suburbs Aug. 18 to 26.

Having participated in last year's Prairie State Games and currently tapering off a swim season for the WildKit Swim Organization, Jaffe, 16, feels he has the necessary preparation to meet the highly competitive situation at the Maccabi Games.

Maccabi swimmers can compete in several events, but Jaffe said the decision on which particular events he would swim wasn't binding yet. The swimming meet will be held at the University of Illinois-Chicago campus.

"One of the significant factors of the Maccabi Games is that the exposure will be good for the sport of swimming," said Jaffe, who will be entering his senior year at Kenwood Academy on the South Side. "I believe it (the Games) will be highly publicized and will be on TV like the Prairie State Games. Just like the Prairie State and the Olympics, swimming is not a highly popular spectator sport, but from the extra publicity you'll see more spectators in the stands."

The Maccabi Games were last held in Toronto two years ago. They mark a social and spiritual celebration for Jews. Jaffe, a member of Kenwood's three-time city championship swim team, was elected next year's captain. At the city meet, he placed fifth in the 100-yard freestyle in 45.6 and grabbed a sixth place medal in the 100-yard backstroke (1:08.63).

Jaffe's credit, his extra-curricular activities include impressive merits. He participated in the 1988 Chicago Public School Science Fair and qualified for the state competition. He also will be the high school newspaper sports editor next year on the "Kenwood Kaleidoscope." "I guess they wanted something alliterative," he said, when quizzed about the colorful nickname of the paper.

Jaffe also grabbed seventh place recently in the state YMCA meet for the 15- to 18-year-olds in the 400-yard freestyle relay. He established a junior (13-14 year-old) mark for the High Ridge YMCA last year in the backstroke with a 1:09.94. Last year he placed eighth in a YMCA state meet.

Unlike many successful swimmers who begin at a very early age, like 4 or 5, Jaffe said he took up swimming during eighth grade at the suggestion of his mother, Rose-Lyn, herself a non-swimmer who wanted to do right for her son's welfare. "She said, 'Why don't you go try out in seventh grade?'" said Jaffe, who splashed into the swim of things the next year going out for the High Ridge YMCA squad, which had a "no-cut" policy.

Jaffe flourished and worked hard. Now he looks back and feels the discipline was worth it. He said he has some definite goals next year on the high school swim team. He is aiming to qualify among the best in the state next year. A tall order, indeed, but Jaffe feels his progress in the sport is self-encouraging. "A very tired" swimmer is how he characterizes himself after a weekly routine.

Jaffe has a brother Todd, who will turn 17 on May 31. Todd, who attends Mather, doesn't swim, but plays defensive tackle on the varsity football team. Sister Tracy, 12, attends Kenwood (age 7-12 program) and swims on a team.

Youth games planned

Gov. James Thompson (left) sizes up his official 1988 Maccabi Youth Games teeshirt for the Games' Commissioner Shayle P. Fox. Thompson, honorary co-chairman of the sporting event along with Mayor Eugene Sawyer, anticipates the arrival of 3,000 teenage Jewish athletes, August 18-25.

You don't have to be Jewish ...

... to be spokesman for the Maccabi Youth Games, which will be held in August in Chicago. Witness the impressive Games poster featuring Michael Jordan and Gary Fencik. So tell us, Why were two non-Jewish athletes chosen to represent a Jewish sporting event? Says Shayle Fox, commissioner of the Games: "Michael and Gary were picked because they represent two fundamental aspects of the Games. Both are known for their athletic achievements, and more importantly, a high regard for sportsmanship and fair play."

And why did two non-Jews choose to be involved in a Jewish sporting event? Jordan had been unfamiliar with the origin of the Games, which are named after the Jewish war hero Judah Maccabee. But the legend of the man who reclaimed the temple in Jerusalem against overwhelming odds sparked Jordan's interest. Fencik, on the other hand, knew all about the Games. His former roommate at Yale was a Maccabi participant, and the experience left a lasting impression.

News, notes and nonsense

The Maccabi Youth Games will attract 3,000 athletes, almost twice the number that competed at the Winter Olympics in Calgary, and they're expected to bring some 22,000 visitors to the city. ...

Maccabi games needs families to host athletes

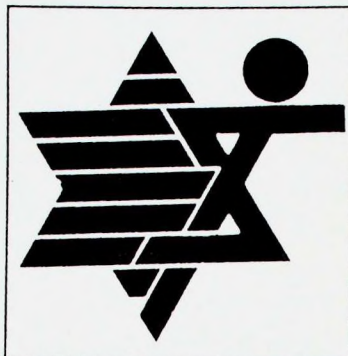

The water supply on the North Shore will be in high demand this August. Hundreds of area families may wash extra loads of t-shirts and set extra plates for dinner, but more importantly they will make friends for life through the host family program of the North American Maccabi Youth Games.

Scheduled from August 18 to 25 and coordinated by the Jewish Community Centers of Chicago, the Games will be one of the largest Jewish communal events in the world this year. More than 1,500 area families will be part of the "Maccabi Experience" as two 13- to 16-year-old youngsters stay in their homes.

"We have signed on about one-third of the homes needed to accommodate the visiting athletes," explained Robert Beaubaire, Chairman of the Housing Committee for the '88 Games. "The numbers of host applications have doubled in the last month alone, but we still need about 1,000 more homes to reach our goal."

With 41 events in 13 sports, the '88 Games will be the largest Maccabi since the biennial event premiered in 1982. However, the host family program will place emphasis on more than medals.

According to Shayle Fox, Commissioner of the Games, "The home hospitality program is one of the most unique and rewarding aspects of the Maccabi Youth Games. By hosting two visiting athletes, families can gain a new awareness and understanding about Jewish cultures around the world."

Maccabi participants will represent countries such as Australia, Canada, Israel, Ireland, Mexico, Venezuela and cities throughout the United States.

Finding host families for the visiting athletes will be a detailed procedure. Initially, families must apply by application. Each potential family will be screened through references they have provided on the application. Host families will then be placed into one of four housing zones.

To help organize the host family effort, an intricate housing structure separating Chicago's northern suburbs into zones, has been implemented. Zones are delineated by geographic areas. Each zone has its own subcommittee.

Interested families can contact the Florence G. Heller, Bernard Horwich/Mayer Kaplan, North Suburban, or Northwest Suburban JCCs to become hosts.

In addition, temples, synagogues, schools, service organizations and chavurot in special areas will adopt entire delegations. This way, visiting athletes will be grouped by region.

"Host families will not have to alter daily schedules," assured Harrell Wittenstein, Assistant Director of Operations and Housing Coordinator for the Games.

"Host families will simply drop off athletes at localized neighborhood 'depots' in the morning. Athletes will travel to competition sites by bus and return in the early evening to be picked up at those same depots," he explained.

The week's events will also offer a variety of cultural exhibits and evening activities to which host families are invited. An open-air concert, and a 10-K Memorial Run commemorating the Israeli athletes slain in Munich are a few of the scheduled activities. In addition, host families will receive priority seating for the Olympic-style opening and closing ceremonies.

CHANUKAH

Remembering Maccabee

Commemoration of Judah Maccabee's victory, which begins with Chanukah, will continue into 1988 in Chicago as the Jewish Community Centers host the biennial North American Maccabi Youth Games, Aug. 18-25.

One of the greatest warriors in Jewish history, Judah Maccabee and his rebels overcame the numerically superior Assyrian army in order to reclaim Jerusalem's Temple and rekindle the Temple lamp. The flame, which burned miraculously for eight days, will symbolize competition and victory at the '88 Maccabi Games here.

More than 3,000 athletes worldwide, ages 13-16 will congregate in Chicago to compete in the games. The events will take place at area high schools, park districts and university sites along the North Shore, city and suburbs. In addition to sporting competitions, there will be ongoing social and cultural events.

The Maccabi Games, a junior version of the Israeli Maccabiah, trace their roots from the Maccabi World Union, which bears the name of Judah Maccabee. The Union was started in the late 19th century. Most Jews in East European countries at that time lived in conditions unfavorable to athletic pursuits.

These same Jews, involved in the growing movement for a national home in Palestine, thought that one essential prerequisite was the improvement of the physiques of ghetto youth. It was the goal of this original Maccabi sports movement to raise the standard of physical fitness and sports capabilities among Jewish youth. The movement also sought to encourage a sense of belonging in the Jewish people.

In 1901, Max Nordau, one of the earliest Zionist leaders, proposed to the 5th Zionist Congress that Jewish people renew their interest in sports and physical fitness.

The idea of the Jewish Olympics or Maccabiah Games was conceived in 1921 by one of the founders and veteran leaders of the Maccabi movement in Palestine, Joseph Yekutieli. The plan was approved in 1929, and in 1932 the first Maccabiah was held in Tel Aviv with delegations from 23 countries and 500 athletes.

The Games not only encouraged health and fitness, but also were an important means for promoting Aliyah. Many athletes and accompanying personnel remained in Palestine after the Games.

Due to growing anti-Semitism in Europe, the third Maccabiah could not be held until 1950. Since then, they have been held regularly every four years, as a two-week international competition.

The junior version of the Israeli Maccabiah Games, the Maccabi Youth Games, was first held in 1982 and has been scheduled biennially in three continental groupings: Europe, Pan America and North America.

In 1983, the first North American Maccabi Youth Games were held in Memphis, the second Games were in Detroit in 1984, the third in Toronto in 1986.

Opportunities for involvement include contributions of time and resources, volunteering and service as host families. For more information about the 1988 Maccabi Youth Games in Chicago, call 675-2200.

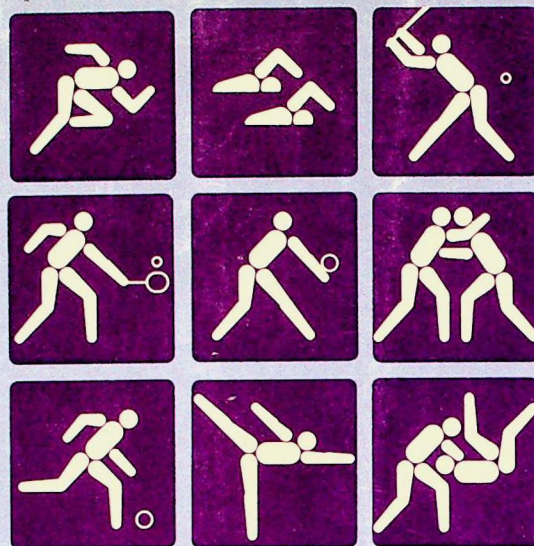

The 1988 North American Maccabi Youth Games are hosted by the Jewish Community Centers of Chicago, coordinated by JCC Metro Teen, affiliated with the Jewish Federation of Metropolitan Chicago and supported by the Jewish United Fund.

The games are jointly sponsored by JWB, Maccabi World Union, Maccabi North America, Maccabi Canada and the U.S. Committee Sports for Israel.

History of the Maccabi Youth Games

It was in Max Nordau's ideal of "healthy soul, healthy body, strong spirit" that the philosophy of Maccabi was born.

In 1932, the first Israeli Maccabiah was held in Tel Aviv with 500 athletes from 23 countries. The second Maccabiah, in 1935, attracted 1700 athletes from 27 countries.

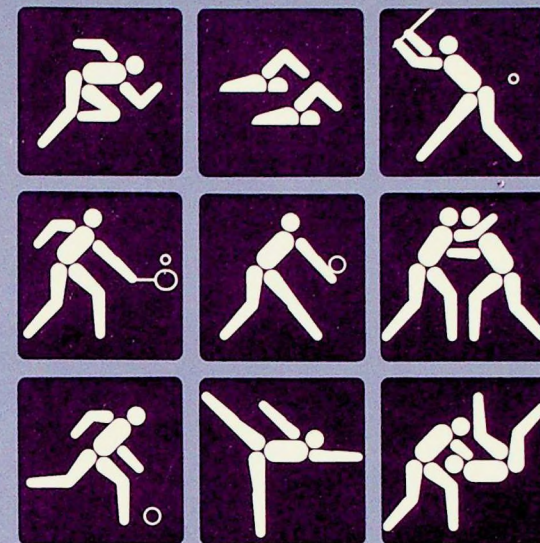

It was another 15 years before the Games took place. The Maccabi movement in Central and Eastern Europe had been destroyed in the flames of the Holocaust. Only 800 athletes from 19 countries participated.

Since 1950, the Games have been held at regular intervals in Israel and in 1985, 4200 athletes from 34 countries competed in 29 sporting events.

The North American Maccabi Youth Games are held every two years in preparation for the Israeli Maccabiah.

The first North American Games were held in Memphis in 1982, with 450 athletes. The second biannual Games were held in Detroit in 1984 with 900 athletes. Participation more than doubled, to 2200 athletes, at the third biannual Games in Toronto in 1986.

The fourth biannual Maccabi Games in Chicago will be hosted by the Jewish Community Centers of Chicago and coordinated by JCC-Metro Teen. The Games are held in cooperation with the National Jewish Welfare Board, Maccabi World Union, Maccabi Canada, and the U.S. Committee Sports for Israel.

The North American Maccabi Youth Games Come to Chicago August 18-25, 1988

Chicago's teenage athletes will join more than 3,000 other athletes in 50 delegations from around the world in one of the largest youth sporting events in the world. Delegations from Argentina, Australia, Brazil, Canada, Columbia, Denmark, France, Great Britain, Israel, Mexico, Peru, Scotland, Switzerland and 36 cities in the United States are expected to compete.

More than an athletic competition...

The impact of the Maccabi Games extends well beyond competition in 37 athletic events. The games provide the athletes who participate with an experience that they will carry with them for a lifetime. The games are designed to promote the meeting of Jewish youth from all over the world, to foster cultural exchange and to develop pride in one's country and one's self through athletic competition.

The idea behind the Maccabi Games is that the teenagers' growth through experience is as important as the competition. No matter what the athletes ultimately accomplish in the competition, they will have learned the value of sound mind and body and the importance of cultural exchange and understanding – all of which will help them become lifelong winners.

Community Involvement

The 1988 Maccabi Games will truly be a community-wide event. 2,500 community volunteers will assist in preparation and administration of the games. In addition, 1,500 volunteer families will house the visiting athletes.

Dear Friends,

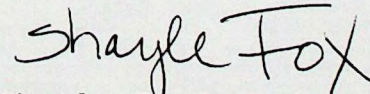

The 1988 North American Maccabi Youth Games are approaching and preparations by the Chicago community are well underway. Already over one hundred of us are actively securing facilities, organizing the competition, planning evening programs, even beginning to line up housing, food, supplies and equipment.

Three thousand athletes aged 13 to 16 from the United States, Canada, Mexico, South America and Israel will compete in some 20 contests under the sponsorship of the Jewish Community Centers of Chicago. The competition is the stage but the story is the unity of the international Jewish community. This "oneness" is the message that will be indelibly implanted in every person involved.

Our early enthusiasm promises a memorable week for competitors, coaches, visitors and the couple of thousand Chicagoans who will be involved in opening their homes and hearts to the kids and their supporters.

We welcome you to join us. Begin your plans to participate now so that you can share the joy and satisfaction from meaningful involvement in this unique pageant of togetherness.

Very truly yours,

Shayle P. Fox
Chairman
